6. Storage of any purchase shall be at the sole risk of the purchaser. Title passes upon the fall of the auctioneer's hammer, and thereafter, while the Association will exercise due caution in caring for and delivering such purchase, it will not hold itself responsible if such purchase be lost, stolen, damaged or destroyed.

Storage charges will be made upon all purchases not removed within ten days from the date of the sale thereof.

7. Guarantee is not made either by the owner or the Association of the correctness of the description, genuineness or authenticity of any lot, and no sale will be set aside on account of any incorrectness, error of cataloguing, or any imperfection not noted. 5—NYMPH AND CUPID

Arthur F. Schurer

525 ⁰⁰

Panel: Height, 12 $\frac{1}{4}$ inches; width, 7 $\frac{3}{4}$ inches

LEANING against the trunk of a tree in the woods, the nude young woman sits on a robe of rich dull red, her back to the spectator and facing somewhat to the left. Her hair, of a warm brown, matches the warmer tones amongst the foliage above her head, her head being seen against lower distant greens of the woods. From the left a Cupid comes springing toward her, arm upraised. The figure of the nymph is carefully studied and firmly modeled, the flesh tones are soft and warm; the whole is colorful and reposeful. It is grace and beauty, not toil and drudgery, that Millet has pictured here, with as much of sentimental and color charm as he put into the heavy figures of his workers in the fields.

Signed on the back, J. F. MILLET.

The dog is standing athwart the view, facing the left, his head up and tongue lolling lightly. The grayish-white and yellowish-brown coat is strongly marked, and the long, bushy tail hangs in a deep loop-curve. The sunshine throws a bit of a shadow on the light green short grass at his feet, and a few detached trees appear in the distance before more distant low hills.

14—THE ABDUCTION

T. H. Derrison

950

Panel: Height, 15½ inches; width, 10 inches

To a wild mountain gorge, whose cliffs rise high on either side, a knight in mediæval costume has brought a young woman. A brook dances down the rocky wall at the right. Beyond the cliffs we catch a glimpse of the sky, against which, high up on the left, rises a tree. While all of Monticelli's productions are of the studio, rather than of life, he gave us wonderful, fantastic dreams of color.

AN interesting early example of a master, who to the present generation is better known for his marine subjects. The scene is that of a studio, the walls of which are a dull red, browned with shadow. Meanwhile in the center of the room the light falls on two easels and two men seated side by side in front of them. The farther one, in his shirt-sleeves and a black vest and trousers, is playing a violin, while his companion, dressed in white nankeen trousers and a black swallow-tail coat is accompanying on the 'cello. Over the back of this man's chair hangs a red apron which adds a note of color to the composition.

A GRAY day in Holland is pictured, with gray-white clouds and dark gray rain clouds hanging low and billowing deep in a sky a bit of whose subdued blue may still be seen in fleeting rifts. Here and there are birds, soaring. Below, a point of land jutting low from the left projects into a sombre, gray stream, the land seen in low tones of rich brown and gray and green, with creamy notes, and disclosing the roofs of a community of cottages beneath the spreading arms of two ancient windmills.

Panel: Height, $7\frac{1}{2}$ inches; length, 11 inches

SEATED in solitude on the lonely waste of a sandy shore, a chap in blue-green coat and gray breeches and a hat with conical crown, his figure facing the blue arm of a bay which ripples in white around its curving shoreline, looks over his shoulder in the spectator's direction, at a large dog standing athwart the view, in the immediate foreground. The dog, in shaggy gray and black coat, is carefully studied, standing on a carpet of rich green turf above the sand line of the shore, and in an evanescent light before a rainstorm advancing against the wind.

2000 v. c. Panel: Height, 16 inches; width, $11\frac{3}{4}$ inches

THE shepherdess, a young woman of rotund features and pensive expression, stands close in the foreground on the left, with her back to the spectator and face profil perdu against a gray and blue sky. A black kerchief confines her golden-brown hair, and she wears a gray cape with a brown hood, a skirt of crushed-strawberry hue and an apron of rich emerald-green—almost of malachite quality. Before her, at the right, is a gracefully straggling young tree in blossom, on whose root her staff or shepherd's crook rests, and in front of and about the tree are two sheep and two lambs. One of the lambs, its soft fleece mellowed by a burst of sunlight, is suckling in the shelter of a gray, bleating ewe. In the distance are the thatched roofs of farm buildings.

Clapp Graham

14000 Panel: Height, $15\frac{3}{4}$ inches; width, $12\frac{1}{2}$ inches

A FONTAINEBLEAU landscape is presented, with rugged trees of sinuous trunk and gnarled, scraggly limbs and branches, standing at either side and appearing darkly in tones of rich and deep brown with accents of silvery gray and white, their leaves in a lighter brown touched with red. Between the trees are glimpses of a dark cerulean sky, relieved by a cumulus cloud-mass of grayish-white, above a descending stream which wanders among rocks, and in the foreground are five dogs. Four of them are looking earnestly aloft, into the mysterious distance of the tree leafage, as though some person or animal were there attracting their attention, and the fifth lies curled up dejectedly on the ground.

Height, 25½ inches; width, 19½ inches

THIS is a forest interior where slender trees grow closely together and the ground is covered with tangled undergrowth. In the right foreground a narrow brook flows out of the picture and the figure of a man with bare arms and legs is kneeling on a rock, apparently catching crawfish in the water. Beyond the figure, and in the extreme distance, is visible a tiny spot of luminous sky seen between the tree trunks, and over the red roof of a small cottage in the upper part of the picture tiny spots of delicate blue show through the foliage.

IN a corner of the poultry-yard, which the French denominate the "basse-cour" as distinguished from any other part of a farmyard or environments of a barn, a number of chickens are roosting on a stone wall, these appearing in the upper portion of the picture, while two hens are seen in the foreground. A great brass kettle and a chip broom are introduced as among the familiar utensils of their surroundings. All the chickens are hens except one, a rooster on the stone wall who, instead of sitting down quietly like the rest, is up and on watch.

ON the left a line of village houses of humble type extends along a broad road bordering a river or canal, the houses dull red and gray and brown, and diminishing in the perspective toward a sky white at the horizon and gray with lowering rain-clouds overhead. A group of girls appears before the nearer houses, and a man walks along the green-edged road toward the gang-plank leading to a cargo boat in the stream on the right—across the stream appearing more cottages.

Height, 25 inches; width, 16½ inches

IN a forest setting with a pool on the left is the figure of a young woman seated on a grassy bank. The figure is in full face view to the spectator with the head turned to the right. The expression and the placing of her hand on the breast seem to indicate a note of alarm lest someone be approaching. The upper half of the figure is nude, while draperies of pink and white cover the lower portion.

Holland Galleries
THE FRENCH COAST

5250 Height, 18 inches; length, 26 inches

A STERLING painting of action in a seaway, where small fishing boats toss among the cresting waves—one of Dupré's vigorous marines. There is plenty of wind, as the swirling sky shows, and the small, yawl-rigged fishers—there are two of them in the near foreground—are pitching in the commotion of the waters. A larger vessel is indicated in the distance, also, leaning some. The artist has been interested in the study of light and shadow among the sails, and in the nearer boat he has shown the figures of its easy-going occupants.

GREEN and level fields of a French countryside are seen, on the right an open one bordered by a green wood in the background, and merging in the foreground with the rear dooryard of a capacious farmhouse. The house with its adjacent outbuildings forms a building group of picturesque roof lines, rising in the middleground and toward the left, on a slight incline, and standing out against an active and varied sky in which there is no blue. At the center, intervening between the house and the great field, a line of pollarded trees shows touches of autumn color, and at the back of the house an old woman in a white cap scatters feed to some chickens.

THE Virgin is shown at full length kneeling at a prie-dieu, facing the spectator. She wears a trailing gown of old-rose hue, bound at the high waist with a rope-girdle of pale blue, and a blue mantle lined in a rosy-gray. She has turned momentarily from her prayer-book stand, on which her right hand rests, while the left is at her breast, and leaning her head toward her left shoulder, with eyes directed abstractedly at the floor, seems to be repeating her prayer inwardly. A nimbus encircles her head. The light falling from the right on the many folds of gown and mantle effects many interesting modulations among the bright colors. Neutral background.
